Green thumbs up

Growing Green, which provides interior landscape and plant services to 400 hotels, retail stores and office complexes, played host this week to the three-day annual conference of the National Interiorscape Network, with 65 attendees, including three from London. Growing Green was chosen as host, in part, because of its financial success during the recession, said Teri Pesapane (pictured left), who founded the company in 1973 with her husband, Joel Pesapane (pictured right). Growing Green increased revenue to $1.8 million from $1.6 million over the last three years. It also invested $85,000 in 2009 in a new showroom.
